

Practice

- The ideal number of team members is:

5-7

- Challenges related to team building, technology, physical distance, language, and cultural differences are common in:

Virtual Teams

- A group of team members who plan and direct themselves toward a common goal is called a:

Self-Managed Team

- Negative behavior such as excessive arguing is likely in which stage of team development?

Storming

- A time for reflection and celebrations occurs in which stage of team development?

Adjourning

Practice

- Members get oriented towards team goals, and team leadership is directive in which stage of team development?

Forming

- Team members begin to be more constructive and to work out differences, while the leader becomes less directive, in which stage of team development?

Norming

- The team members realize interdependence, and leadership tends to delegate in which stage of team development?

Performing

- Team Leaders should exhibit the same consistent style of leadership throughout team development.

False

- Persistent negative team dynamics usually results from:

Organizational Culture